After a short break, noted television journalist and talk show host Arnab Goswami again turned the king of social media trends on 15.12.2016, after he announced the launch of his 'new venture'. Reports suggest he has set up a news channel called 'Republic', which will go live before the Uttar Pradesh Assembly elections. Speaking at the 10th anniversary of IEEMA (Indian Electronic Equipment Manufacturer's Association), the apex body for the power equipment industry, Swamy said Republic will launch on 26 January.

On November 1, 2016 Goswami resigned as editor-in-chief of Times Now, and announced his plans to start a venture of his own. Rahul Shivshankar (also a DU alumnus) has since taken over as editor-in-chief of Times Now. Reports also suggest that Goswami's core team members also resigned from Times Now days after his resignation.

Arnab Goswami had shot to fame with his daily prime show 'The News Hour', through which he single-handedly brought Times Now to the fore of English News television in India. The show was the most watched news debate conducted in Goswami's unique style .
